Course Description

What is politics – the quest for the common good (Plato, 360 BCE) or who gets what, when, and how (Lasswell, 1936)? This course introduces you to the study of politics by reading many (excerpts from) foundational texts of political science and political theory, which we will discuss in relation to current affairs.

The readings and our debates in class will provide you with a historical understanding of what defines political modernity: states and nations in the international system, collective action and representation in mass societies, trajectories of democracy and dictatorship, politics and development in the context of capitalism. We study how the individual relates to her/his political system: how interests form and compete, how political parties and interest groups act as intermediaries between the individual and the state, how social change and contention might transform politics.

A key objective is to discover and understand the concerns, the language, and the methods of political science. Thus, you will develop an analytical understanding of core concepts such as power, authority, democracy, collective action, interests, or social capital. Simultaneously, you will explore how major theoretical approaches differ in their interpretation and explanation of political reality, as well as in the normative models and demands that they advance.

This is a discussion course, and students are expected to participate actively in debate during class.

Course Learning Outcomes

Students will learn the basic structures and processes in modern politics.

Students will learn the most important concepts, theories and methods in political science. Students will learn to develop analytical arguments about continuity and change in modern politics.

Students will learn to engage constructively in discussions about politics by substantiating normative viewpoints with empirical evidence and analytical rigor.

General Education

The “old” (for students that arrived at AUP before Fall19) general education program at AUP consists of four requirements: Speaking the World, Modeling the World, Mapping the World, and Comparing Worlds. This course fulfills the old “Mapping the World” (GE1010) requirement and, as such, has the following learning objectives:

- understand the basics of political theory and social scientific inquiry
- learn the specificity of politics
- approach modernity from a political perspective

Attendance Policy

Students studying at The American University of Paris are expected to attend ALL scheduled classes, and in case of absence, should contact their professors to explain the situation. It is the student's responsibility to be aware of any specific attendance policy that a faculty member might have set in the course syllabus. The French Department, for example, has its own attendance policy, and students are responsible for compliance. Academic Affairs will excuse an absence for students' participation in study trips related to their courses.

Attendance at all exams is mandatory.

IN ALL CASES OF MISSED COURSE MEETINGS, THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR COMMUNICATION WITH THE PROFESSOR, AND FOR ARRANGING TO MAKE UP MISSED WORK, RESTS SOLELY WITH THE STUDENT.

Whether an absence is excused or not is ALWAYS up to the discretion of the professor or the department. Unexcused absences can result in a low or failing participation grade. In the case of excessive absences, it is up to the professor or the department to decide if the student will receive an "F" for the course. An instructor may recommend that a student withdraw, if absences have made it impossible to continue in the course at a satisfactory level.

Students must be mindful of this policy when making their travel arrangements, and especially during the Drop/Add and Exam Periods.

Grading Policy

a. Class participation	15%
b. Weekly responses to one of the guiding questions on our course readings	20%
c. Critical review of selected course readings	30%
d. Final exam in the format of a critical review	35%

Students are expected to have prepared the assigned readings prior to the class session

If you miss a written exercise without valid justification, your grade for the missed exam will be F.

I reserve A for outstanding work, demonstrating superior effort, mastery of information and understanding of concepts. A grade of B indicates a solid effort, a good grasp of information, and above-average comprehension of concepts. A grade of C reflects a minimally acceptable effort and comprehension, while a grade of C- or below indicates results that are less than satisfactory.

Class-participation

An excellent class-participation grade will depend on consistent attendance, regular active participation, as well as the ability to respond to and to respect classmates' contributions and views. Simple attendance without participation will earn you a class-participation grade of C.

Weekly responses

Once per week, students will write a response to one of the guiding questions, which come with each course reading on Blackboard. The response should be a short paragraph (around five sentences), submitted in your Blackboard Student Journal (under assignments) BEFORE the class starts in which the course reading is being discussed. The final grade will be for all responses together, but I will provide interim feedback throughout the semester.

Critical reviews (one during the semester, one as the final exam):

Students will write a paper (strictly limited to 5 pages) reviewing the required readings of a set of classes. These papers will compare and evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of the thesis/arguments of the texts. In grading, I will favour analysis over description, and will be looking for critical insight, systematic thinking, and creativity. (30% each)

- You are expected to analyze – rather than summarize – your topic, and to develop your argument(s) convincingly.
- Your writing should be coherent. Help the reader to follow your line of reasoning by making it explicit: An introduction should outline what you will present and why it is interesting. The main body should develop your argument(s) step by step, and a conclusion should sum them up in a final evaluation.
- Imagine that the reader is unfamiliar with both the topic/question and the sources you are discussing.

All written work must be your own. Students submitting plagiarized work for any assignment will automatically receive a grade of F for the whole course. Plagiarism is defined as the act of misrepresenting work done by others as one's own. It constitutes a serious violation of AUP rules, and may result in more serious disciplinary action.
