Course Description

Through the work of directors such as Welles, Olivier, Kurosawa, Branagh, Kozintsev and Godard we explore the links between a director's adaptation of a Shakespeare play and the rich poetic language that we find in Shakespeare's texts. Films also of central importance are those that give us a window onto spaces "behind the scenes" and into the life of Shakespeare himself, such as Al Pacino's documentary Looking for Richard and Stoppard's Shakespeare in Love. An early focus on Taymor's adaptation of Titus Andronicus and its depiction of the barbaric will lead us to questions about the filmic representation of the "Other" and how it elucidates the language of this mystifying early Shakespeare play. In comparing this dark play to the lighter Midsummer Night's Dream, we can discover that Shakespeare's thematic commentaries on power structures can take on many generic forms. Through this analysis, we begin to see how the language of film can unlock the secrets of Shakespeare's world. We see as well, that the language of cinema owes much to the plays of Shakespeare.

Course Learning Outcomes

This course allows students to do close readings of Shakespeare's plays as well as explore more deeply the various directors whose works have been influenced by Shakespeare's plays. Films studied range from adaptations to spin-offs to thematic uses of Shakespeare's ideas and plots.

How does the language of film, as developed in the films we will study, add to or detract from the language of Shakespeare's plays themselves?

Attendance Policy

Students studying at The American University of Paris are expected to attend ALL scheduled classes, and in case of absence, should contact their professors to explain the situation. It is the student's responsibility to be aware of any specific attendance policy that a faculty member might have set in the course syllabus. The French Department, for example, has its own attendance policy, and students are responsible for compliance. Academic Affairs will excuse an absence for students' participation in study trips related to their courses.

Attendance at all exams is mandatory.

IN ALL CASES OF MISSED COURSE MEETINGS, THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR COMMUNICATION WITH THE PROFESSOR, AND FOR ARRANGING TO MAKE UP MISSED WORK, RESTS SOLELY WITH THE STUDENT.

Whether an absence is excused or not is ALWAYS up to the discretion of the professor or the department. Unexcused absences can result in a low or failing participation grade. In the case of excessive absences, it is up to the professor or the department to decide if the student will receive an "F" for the course. An instructor may recommend that a student withdraw, if absences have made it impossible to continue in the course at a satisfactory level.

Students must be mindful of this policy when making their travel arrangements, and especially during the Drop/Add and Exam Periods.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE PROFICIENCY STATEMENT: As an Anglophone university, The American University of Paris is strongly committed to effective English language mastery at the undergraduate level. Most courses require scholarly research and formal written and oral presentations in English, and AUP students are expected to strive to achieve excellence in these domains as part of their course work. To that end, professors include English proficiency among the criteria in student evaluation, often referring students to the university Writing Lab where they may obtain help on specific academic assignments. Proficiency in English is monitored at various points throughout the student's academic career, most notably during the admissions and advising processes, while the student is completing general education requirements, and during the accomplishment of degree program courses and senior theses.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE REQUIREMENTS:

Since English is the language of instruction at AUP, all candidates for admission must demonstrate English proficiency at a level that will ensure their ability to successfully complete university level work.

All candidates whose mother tongue is not English must also provide the results of one of the following options:

1. Computerized TOEFL (Test of English as a Foreign Language)
2. Paper-based TOEFL including the Test of Written English (TWE)
3. TOEIC (Test of English of International Communication)

IELTS (International English Language Testing System).

Grading Policy

25% of your grade will be based on course participation which will include informal presentation or short writing on parts of the plays;

25% will be based on a final paper (6-8 pages) due at the end of the semester (exact due date to be determined);

25% will be based on mid-term paper or project;
and 25% on a final comprehensive exam—format to be determined.
